BRYAN SPEAKS ON HARMONY

Says Deserters of '96 Cannot Return Without Injury to the Democratic Party.

MUST CHANGE THEIR WAYS

Will Not Forgive the Faction of His Party Who Deserted Him in the Hour of His Need.

BOSTON, July 24.—Nearly 4000 Democrats gathered at Naticket today and participated in the "harmony" meeting arranged by the New England Democratic League, now the political organization which is expected to develop its strength in the fall campaign. Mayor Collins, of this city, acted as "moderator," as he expressed it, and presented in order Edward M. Shepard of New York; Senator Edward W. Carmack, of Tennessee, and William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, who expounded and discussed the issues of the campaign to a marked satisfaction of the audience.

Col. W. A. Gaston and Charles S. Hamlin, rival candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Massachusetts, were present, while Lewis Lyon, of New York; Congressman Wilson, of that state, and John B. Thayer, of Massachusetts, were conspicuous among the guests.

HON. WILLIAM J. BRYAN
RESPONDS TO TOAST.

The Hon. William J. Bryan responded to the toast:

"The Basis of Harmony."
He said in part:
"In view of numerous harmony dinners and the discord they have created, it may not be out of place to consider the basis of harmony. The word 'harmony' is euphonious and the idea which it conveys is a delightful one. Harmony is but a synonym for order and is not the result of chance, but a product of inexorable law.

"The great founder of the Democratic party whose profound philosophy sounded all the depths of human nature and measured the height and breadth of human government not long before the end of his eventful life, said in a letter to Mr. Lee, that there were but two permanent parties, the aristocratic and the Democratic; that those two parties existed in every country and that where there was freedom to think, speak and write, these parties would become apparent. With the aristocratic party he classed 'those who fear and distrust the people and wish to draw all power from them into the hands of the higher classes.' With the Democratic party he classed 'those who identify themselves with the people, have confidence in them, cherish and consider them as the most honest and safe, though not the most wise, depository of the public interests.' Every well informed student of history will recognize this distinction. In every community you can draw a line separating the aristocrat from the Democrat. It will not be a perpendicular line, nor will it be a horizontal one; it will not separate those of illustrious lineage from those of humble birth; it will not separate the rich from the poor; it will not separate the educated from the uneducated. It will not be along lines of vocation or occupation; but it will separate those 'with the tastes, spirit, assumption and traditions of the aristocracy' from those who 'believe in a government controlled by the people and favor political and legal equality.'

"There can always be harmony among Democrats who have the purpose that Jefferson had and are willing to employ the methods that Jefferson employed. There can always be harmony among Democrats who believe in a government for the people and are willing that all the departments of the government shall be operated by the people and for the benefit of the people. Differences of the mind can be reconciled; differences of purpose cannot. Between one who is at heart an aristocrat and one who is in reality a Democrat, there is a great gulf fixed.

"The Republican party of today is aristocratic in its policies and tendencies for it is controlled by a few in the interest of a few, but there are many Republicans who remain with their party only because they do not understand the change which has taken place in that party within the last few years. There can be no doubt of the Democratic instincts of a large majority of the members of the Republican party but that party today is so controlled by organized wealth that the rank and file of the party are not consulted about the policies nor are the interests of the rank and file considered by the leaders. With the exception of the tariff question, the Republican party has not in recent years honestly submitted a single important issue to the arbitration of the ballot; or even to the judgment of the members of its own party. It has written ambiguous platforms and forced its policies through congress after elections.

"As there are many in the Republican party who have adhered to the party notwithstanding the change that the organization has undergone, so there are some who call themselves Democrats who have themselves undergone a change which has alienated them from the Democratic party or from any party worthy of the name. "To attempt to patch up an apparent harmony between those who are not in sympathy with Democratic purposes is not only a waste of time, but would prove disastrous. The men who deserted the party in 1896 may be divided into two classes. Those who left because they understood the issue presented and those who left because they did not understand the real nature of the contest. Until the former are completely changed in their sympathies they cannot return to the party without injuring it.

"The latter will be reconciled to the party when they themselves become aware of the real character of the life and death struggle now being waged between plutocracy and Democracy. I say plutocracy, because the aristocracy of today is one of wealth rather than of birth and it includes not only those who have been alienated from the common people by the possession of great wealth, but those who although without wealth pander to it and measure all things by a money standard. Organized wealth has become so potent in governmental affairs that some even now despair of applying any effective remedy. But such underestimate the patriotism of the people and the strength of the public conscience. The people have a remedy within their power, namely the ballot, and with it they can and will right every wrong, and remedy every grievance.

"The Democratic party must have a controlling purpose, unchanged by victory or defeat; it must stand for that purpose at all times and everywhere, unmoved by threats of disaster and uninfluenced by promise of temporary gain. It must have a character, for character is as essential in a party as it is in an individual. No one will trust an unstable man or one so without principle that his position upon any moral question cannot be guessed in advance. Neither will the people trust a party that is willing to write into its platform today anything that promises to catch a few votes or strike out of its platform tomorrow anything that will alienate a few votes. Even if it desired to do so our party could not compete with the Republican party in the use of money in campaigns or in the deception or coercion of voters, because large campaign funds can only be secured in return for the promise of favoritism and our people are not in a position to coerce. Our party must have principles and proclaim them; it must stand by them and defend them, relying upon its faith in the righteousness of those principles and upon its faith in the intelligence and patriotism of the people.

"We cannot tell what issues we may have to meet; we can only determine to meet them in a Democratic spirit, to apply to them Democratic principles and to take the people's side always. In 1892 the paramount issue was the tariff reform and the Democratic party boldly asserted its demand for a tariff for revenue only. It fought the campaign and it won, but its majority was so narrow that a few senators, disloyal to the party on this subject, defeated the verdict of the people rendered at the polls. But the failure of the party to do all that it promised would not have been so disastrous but for the fact that the Wilson bill, unsatisfactory as it was to tariff reformers had to bear the sins of a Republican financial system which was supported by our administration against the protest of an overwhelming majority of the voters of the party. The defeat of 1894 was more disastrous than any that the party has experienced since and it was due to the fact that the administration deserted the people on the money question. In 1896 the money question had forced to the front made paramount, not by the action of the majority of the Democratic party, but by the attempt of a minority of the party to add the Republican party to chain the country to an appreciating dollar. Without abandoning its position on the tariff question the party met this issue and took the side of the people. In spite of the desertion of many formerly conspicuous in its councils of the Democratic party polled a million more votes than it had ever polled before and would have won but for the indefensible methods of the Republican party, whose leaders held all the protectionist Republicans by declaring the tariff issue to be paramount, modified the wrath of most of the free au-

ILWACO BOY IS KILLED

Thirteen-Year-Old Son of Dr. Martin Is Instantly Killed While Hauling Hay on the Hirsch Farm.

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 24.—No president ever received a more sincere heartfelt and patriotic welcome than that given President Roosevelt by the people of New Jersey. From the time he landed on New Jersey soil until he left he was the recipient of a continuous ovation. President Roosevelt, on invitation of Governor Franklin Murphy, visited the encampment of the Second Brigade, N. J. N. G., at Sea Girt.

President Roosevelt and Governor Murphy and staff reviewed the troops in camp at the conclusion of the review, the president addressed the assembled troops and multitude, which had gathered, numbering nearly 15,000. Arrangements for a reception of the president were excellent in the main, but for almost two hours Roosevelt was without his guard of secret service officers, five of whom were with him on the trip.

The military contingent absolutely refused to recognize the authority of badges or of passes of the secret service operatives, and in two instances the soldiers used their bayonets against the operatives to enforce the commands of their officers.

Fitzsimmons said: "What I want and what I am going to get, is the championship. That is everything to me."

The company owns a steamer, May West, of St. Michael. She was flung out at Dawson in June. When she was ready to start Captain Ensign went to the consul and demanded the register of the vessel, which had been deposited in Saylor's office. The captain however could not produce the receipt for the papers. It had been mislaid by his predecessor. The consul refused to give Ensign the papers without the receipt. The first victim was shot and killed in the station house; the second was taken to the park, where he was hanged and then riddled with bullets and cut to pieces.
